A personal view
to the world of motorsport

Illustrated with photos and water colour paintings of Uli Ehret

Dear reader, I would like to introduce you to the world of motorsport - with my personal view to the „human“ side. To show you how wonderful this community is, may not be new to you. But right now, in May 2020, as I miss the community of racing fans from all over the world very much, I would like to bring back the memories, how overwhelming it is to meet like-minded people at a racing event. Especially in the time of forced contactlessness, I would like to show the wonderful thing called ‚togetherness‘.

Legend

Jack Sears

Michael Cassel, a good friend and great Cobra fan, took this photo in 2016 during the Le Mans Classic event from the American racing driver Jack Sears. Sears drove the breathtakingly beautiful and fast AC Cobra Coupé A98 at Le Mans in 1964. You could tell a thousand stories about his long life in racing. But when I look at this photo, I also see this bliss, which I would like to illustrate to you. Michael Cassel and Jack Sears are celebrating a wonderful moment at the moment of the photo shoot.

His gaze into the camera says it all. I don't have to add anything to that. But I see even more in his portrait: namely, the „human side“ of our fathers, our mothers, our family members. Which for us went through many dangers, adventures and risky times. Listening to them, seeing them and absorbing their experiences and feelings is part of why I love working on my stand so much. This is this wonderful „human factor“ that flows in myself in many ways. And the happiness that comes from listening to you, to race visitors, pilots and team members from all over the world. Because they are all united at this race-track, because they too find their „human happiness“ exactly there.

at one of my exhibitions is full of emotions. Here Gordon Murray visits me again at Le Mans - and I can finally show him a watercolour art work of his car from my hand. He designed the McLaren GTR, which won the Le Mans 24 Hours in 1995.
From his reaction, I could feel that he was really looking forward to taking the original with him to England - which he had been waiting for in secret for a long time. The joy that his stroke of genius from 1995 will still be recognized and appreciated in 2015 is easy to read too.

The French visitor told me his story during the 24 Hours of Le Mans 2007, about his very touching encounter with Colin Chapman. The photo shows him as a child, next to Colin Chapman, the designer and then also driver of the Lotus 11 with start number 32 at scrutineering at the Place des Jacobins before the big race in 1956. In the 1980s he was a track marshal at Le Mans. He told all of this with that glow in his eyes that we shared that day.

„For the unknown Marshal“

water colour art work of Uli Ehret

#188

This watercolour bears it in the title: the unsung heroes of the racetracks are certainly the marshals. Their stories - and certainly those of the 1963 Le Mans 24 Hours - interest me very much. Marshals regularly visit me at Le Mans or Goodwood before the race and tell me their breathtaking stories of past and present. The fact that they do this voluntarily and unpaid shows their dedication to motor-sport.

Sometimes you feel the incomparable aura when you meet people. Meeting Stirling Moss at the Le Mans 24 Hours in 2009 was one of those magical moments. Early in the morning, he was meeting me in the paddock of the classic Aston Martin racing cars for a signature campaign. Aston Martin celebrated his 50th Anniversary of the Le Mans victory 1959 with a car parade on Saturday at Le Mans - and I'm still celebrating this unique experience with Stirling Moss today.

What would be this world without supporters? Here is a picture of a very hot Le Mans Classic Event 2010. Geoff Doughty, Daniel Acar and the reporter from Radio Le Mans show their most beautiful smile in the early hours of the morning - even before the fierce midday heat. I owe a lot to all three of them. They have continuously made word-of-mouth propaganda and thus made many painting jobs and image purchases possible. Radio Le Mans reported live from our exhibition tent several times during the 24 hours. In alternation with John Hindhaugh in the studio, both reporters swarmed about my pictures - while many of the listeners in the car came to the racetrack. They made it clear that this was honest publicity with purchases of my pictures. They're real supporters.

Engineers

„Against all Odds“
Aquarell von Uli Ehret
#348

Ulrich Baretzky himself is a watercolor painter. However, he never had much time to do so. Because he is much better known for his engineering skills. He is the driving force in the engine construction of the Audi Sport department. In 2017, the Automuseum Sinsheim invited him, his 14-times successful Le Mans-winning engines, all his employees, and of course an R18 to a Le Mans evening. I had the honour to conduct an interview with Ulrich Baretzky for almost two hours in front of about 300 guests. He described the spectacular moments of the victories at Le Mans in the years 2000 to 2015 in his inimitable way. The evening was unforgettable due to the fascinating people in this environment. That evening it also became clear to me that the mechanics and engineers present themselves are all artists in their very special field. And every race car is (almost) unique.

Without fun and humour, this earth is a desolate planet. We all love the British sense of humour. For example, to run in broad daylight disguised as Michael Jackson and his monsters through Le Mans - of course with ghetto blaster and „thriller“ at full volume. This, too, is one of the brilliant moments on the racetracks. Peaceful but exuberant spectators who celebrate this moment in life to enjoy carefree and unrestrained. Live the moment - these guys succeeded particularly well.

Liz Halliday is a highly talented horse rider. But as if four hooves and the challenge to ride them on international tournaments would not be enough already - she also rides races cars. I got to know her team manager and her at Le Mans - when she raced in LMP2. At Silverstone Classic 2009 - only a few weeks later - she drove one of the incredibly beautiful Alfa Romeo Gulietta Sprint Zagatos. All three challenges are immense: A horse with its own will and character, an LMP2 at night at Le Mans, a fragile and unbelievably expensive Zagato - and you have to carry all the responsibility for the animal, the owners of the race cars, other competitors - and very much for yourself too. And in the end: What would a race car be, without a person willing to show its talents. Without this human being risking his life to entertain hundreds, thousands or million of spectators?

The most beautiful human moments are those, when visitors of my exhibitions are completely surprised with gifts from friends or family. Here we see an English Le Mans pilgrim who has visited my stand countless times with her friends. A man from this group of friends called me at home in winter and told me that he was going to get married - and he wanted to surprise his beloved bride with a big canvas print at Le Mans. Said - done - and she will probably never forget that.

If, like Johnny O'Connell, you're a star of the sports car scene in the US, but you're less well-known in Europe, then you've got to get away with the 14 days at Le Mans somehow. In 2005, Johnny was one of the first pilots to discover my small sales stand. Over the years, he kept coming up from the pits and strolling past us. But if you think that he ordered a C5 pit stop scene for his house in the USA, then you are wrong. He ordered the Auto Union watercolor in the largest possible size on canvas for his living room overlooking a lake. This choice was like his visits: surprising.

Heroes

The definition of a hero is certainly different for everyone. But I have one - that of my childhood. René Arnoux was my idol of Formula One. How to pick your idols when you're 14 years old. At that time, Formula 1 was quite suitable for heroes. And as a teenager of my stroke, I'm sure you'd want to be in the cockpit of a superior racing car. Now the Renault Turbo was also vulnerable - but if Arnoux led, it was my time to celebrate. But you don't become a hero just because of the mileage of leadership - I think. But by the heroic way, like Gilles Villeneuve in the Ferrari and René Arnoux in the Renault fought for the second position 1979 in Dijon for sure. Wheel to wheel, touches everywhere, the final stage of the French Grand Prix was about the honour of the Grande Nation, as well as about that of the hot spur from Canada. Without throwing themselves off the track - fair but tough - both became heroes. Not for nothing you can find this racing scene in youtube today immediately.

Helpers Family & Friends

Through friends and family, your life will be rich and colorful. The help that comes to you, the kindness that surrounds you, the reliability and honesty, the joy of small things. All this becomes twice as important at my exhibition stands and thus twice as beautiful and impressive. This vagabond life on the racetracks always brings surprises. It is only good if you then have men and women with you, who know the advice, who are there to help with their deeds and tools. If you have helpers who stand at the stand at night, and those who support with their idiosyncrasies just when everyone else doesn't know what to do. We are drivers, furniture makers, carpet fitters, decorators, tax experts, cashiers, electricians, packers, framing assistants, translators, chefs, security, room keepers, first responders, Le Mans experts, colour consultants and . . .happy.

I f
there's a photo that reflects the "common joy of the moment", it's this one. Jack Leconte, team manager of Larbre Competition, has been visiting my exhibitions regularly since 2005. At the Retromobile in Paris, but of course especially in his „natural hunting ground“, the 24 Hours of Le Mans. He's one of the big bosses of a private team. Since the 1990s, he has been regularly represented in the GT class with one or two vehicles, including Porsche or Aston Martin, Corvette, Saleen or a Viper. At its home race track in Val de Vienne, the hotel of the track awaits in each of the 24 rooms with a large print of my racing paintings. Many of my pictures adorn the rooms of his sponsors.

Collectors

I never thought there would be so many passionate art collectors among motorsport fans. Joe Flay is one of them. He runs an Automobilia website, is a passionate kart driver and multiple winner of the 24-hour karting race with his team. In 2007 he got to know my pictures and collected some of the most sought after originals over the years.

His brother had the idea - whether you shouldn't paint a Le Mans car cemetery - which never existed, but which everyone would like to have. Said and done - and after the enthusiastic handing over of the original, the left half of the painting was added the following year to collect even more „scrap“ in watercolour. That's wonderful.

Mechanics

I have always been looking forward to the visits of my friends, customers and guests. But when I see these pictures, I realize that I miss those moments in particular. The engineers and mechanics from Multimatic, Ford, Toyota and many other teams did not only come once to our stand during the 5 days of our Le Mans exhibition - often several times. Sometimes they came as a concentrated team of „Car 66“ or „Alonsos TS 050“. With each of these men, it's an infinite pleasure to talk about exactly what he's doing on the car, where they're coming from, exactly how it all began in their career. This is all just magical, because on the big races, you have the time.

Petrolheads

Many friendships were started at Le Mans. I am sure you, dear reader, are looking forward to meet very special people at the next Le Mans 24H event, from one or the other team, or from one or the other stand, just like the three of us in the photo. Perhaps you have a favorite restaurant on the Sarthe, or have been staying in the same hotel for years. Maybe you always sleep on the same campsite. Enjoy exactly this or that view of the racetrack every year - and feel at home for that very reason. That's how I felt when Wolfgang Warnecke and Peter Fordemann were guests in the „tent“. Then this was „Le Mans“. That's wonderful.

There is hardly a more beautiful feeling for me as an artist to decorate the stand when the tent is closed, and then on the first day when visitors are allowed to open it. In all the years since 2005, I have certainly opened such a stand or museum exhibition in the truest sense of the word with my wife and friends and colleagues almost a hundred times. The next time it happens, it will be something very special for me. It was special every time. And the joy was always great during the days of opening. But at the next exhibition, whether you're a spectator, marshal, pilot, team manager, engineer, sponsor, collector, friend, helper, idol, hero or legend, your visits will delight me even more than ever before. Thank you for your support in all these years - and especially in 2020.
